Beacons of Light Update: Liturgical Ministries

In our Catholic faith, we often talk about how the Eucharist is “the source and summit of the Christian life” (Catechism 1324). This is why we attach such importance to the celebration of the Mass. The Church says that in the Mass, as in all liturgical celebrations, we as the People of God and the Body of Christ are able to participate in the work of God, especially in His work of redemption. In doing so, we are, among other things, privileged to offer ourselves in worship to the Father, through Jesus, in the Holy Spirit.

Fr. Bill has been writing about the Mass, including its structure and meaning, so I won't attempt to do that this week. Instead, I just want to briefly highlight an aspect of the Mass. The Church, through the Second Vatican Council, encourages us to actively participate in the Mass. This primarily refers to our interior disposition, being attentive to what God is speaking and doing, while responding with our heartfelt worship. This interior disposition, then, can allow us to also join in the externals of worship, through the responses, singing, and gestures of the Mass that are proper to us.

Within this, of course, there are also special roles that individuals, at times, may take on to aid in the communal celebration and worship. These special roles aren't limited to the priests and deacons, either (though they are distinct from them).

And so, I wanted to take the opportunity to express my gratitude to all of those within Stella Maris who so generously give of their time and talent to assist us in those roles (often referred to as liturgical ministries). There are a lot of you, and for that, I am deeply appreciative.

The list includes all of our deacons who live out their vocation of service, in part, through their role in the Mass, as well as our lectors who proclaim God's word and lead us in prayer as they read the intercessions, our altar servers, who not only perform various functions but can demonstrate a genuine love for our Lord through their actions, setting an example for all of us, and our extraordinary ministers of Holy Communion, who assist the clergy in distributing the Body of Christ, both at Mass and in taking our Lord to our sick and homebound.

I thank our ushers and greeters who joyfully welcome everyone in, seeking to share with them Christ's own love, as well as help facilitate our offering back to the Lord. And our church cleaners, our art and environment volunteers, and our sacristans who come at various times, arriving early and staying late at Mass to make sure everything is in its proper place and everyone is ready to go, setting the stage for a beautiful celebration. Our musicians, cantors, and choir members, who add to that beauty by sharing their gifts and voices in praise to the Lord.

As I thank all of you from the bottom of my heart, I also want to encourage others to prayerfully consider whether you are able to help with any of this. We could definitely use it. I reiterate, of course, that our participation in the Mass does not necessitate that we take on one of these specific roles. There are many valid reasons why we may not do so at this time. If someone is able and feeling that call to help, I invite you to reach out.

If you feel called to learn more about or join a liturgical ministry at Stella Maris, you can visit our website at stellamarisfamily.org/liturgical-ministries (or scan the QR code below) and fill out the interest form. You can also email me at pastor@stellamarisfamily.org. We will schedule training sessions soon, so watch for those details. To help us schedule them at times and locations that will work best, it's helpful to know who might be interested.

Again, to all those who help us in our most important activity, namely, the celebration of the Mass, and all those who bless our Stella Maris family in so many other ways, I say, “Thank you.”

1 St. Mary's Pig Roast was held on Saturday, August 1, at St. Mary's Church. 2 The Men of St. Peter had a recruitment gathering at St. Peter's on August 14. 3 Benediction with Fr. Packer on Monday, August 24, at St. Peter's Church. 4-8 Our first High School Youth Ministry night of the 2026/2027 formation year had its kickoff party on Sunday, August 30, where they had fun launching water balloons.

Labor Day Mass Schedule

On Monday, September 7, three Masses will be offered at St. Bernadette, St. Mary, and St. Thomas More, all at 9 am, for Labor Day.

There will be no Eucharistic Adoration or confessions at St. Peter on Labor Day.

I Have Called You Friends (Part I): Divine Intimacy

The Book of Deuteronomy ends on a sad note. I guess I should have given you a spoiler alert before saying that. Sorry! Last time I checked, though, Deuteronomy wasn't currently on a list of bestsellers. And they haven't yet made a movie about it, so maybe you'll forgive me. The Israelites had been forty years in the desert, and Moses had died. So they were right to be bummed: "Since then no prophet has arisen in Israel like Moses, whom the LORD knew face to face" (Deut 34:10).

Moses knew the Lord face to face. There was a kind of divine intimacy. Moses spoke with God as a man does with his friend (see Ex 33:11). The people were awaiting a prophet like Moses (see Deut 18:15), and all they got was a lot of melancholy. Nobody panned out, because none of them knew the Lord face to face.

This all changes, of course, when Jesus arrives on the scene. Jesus was a prophet like Moses who sprang up from among the people. And what is more, Jesus was the Son of God who not only knew the Father face to face, but who had seen the Father's face and not only his back as Moses did. "No one has ever seen God," John the Evangelist says. "The only Son, God, who is at the Father's side" has seen him (cf. Jn 1:18).

But Jesus doesn't keep the Father to himself. Instead, he "has revealed him" (Jn 1:18). Whoever sees Jesus sees the Father (see Jn 14:9). Jesus is the face of God; in Jesus, God has a human face. And Jesus calls us his friends. "I have called you friends, because I told you everything I have heard from my Father" (Jn 15:15). Jesus calls us into friendship with him, into a divine face-to-face, because the Lord wants to know us this intimately.

All of this would have been completely shocking in the broader Greco-Roman society at the time. That culture regarded friendship as possible only between equals. Yet, here is Jesus — God — claiming to be friends with...us. How can the eternal, infinite, omni-this and omni-that God become our friend? How could the Creator make friends with his creature? Well, he did so by becoming a creature — taking on flesh and becoming like us in all things but sin.

Wonder of wonders! The God of the universe calls us his friends. He invites us to an intimate relationship with him, one characterized by face-to-face communication, the way good friends speak with one another. This, of course, implies heart-to-heart sharing. It implies intimacy, vulnerability, and love. God wishes to share his heart with us, and he asks us to share our hearts with him. He invites us to rest on his heart as he abides in the heart of the Father.

This year, our ministry theme invites us to lean into the divine intimacy of friendship with God. He's called us his friends. Do we believe it? Really? Because if we do, we can ditch our sad Deuteronomic dirges and spend time delighting in the Lord as he delights in us.

I'd like to close by sharing some of my own reflections on the artwork for the year. First of all, I'm grateful to Rachael Williams for all of her work on this piece, and to my team for their feedback. Inspired by the road to Emmaus, we see Jesus (indicated by the halo) walking with two disciple-friends on the Way. Note how the road kind of continues up and infinitely around the sun, or is it the Son in Eucharistic form? The Way leads us into the Eucharistic heart of Christ, where we, on this side of heaven, experience the divine face to face and enter most deeply into friendship with Christ. The Cross also stands prominently at the center, because on the Cross Jesus reveals the depths of his love for his friends. He invites us to share in this cruciform love. But more on that next time.

Oh! And check out the prayer on the cover of the bulletin!

Our choirs are open to adults and students in middle school and high school.

The St. Bernadette choir rehearses Wednesday evening from 7-8 pm in the church.

Beginning September 10, choirs for St. Peter and St. Mary will rehearse at the home of director Suzanne Schneller in New Richmond on Thursday evenings from 4:00 pm to 6:00 pm. Interested parishioners may contact music directors Bob Bridges or Suzanne Schneller after Mass for more details.
